Person Centered Description Facilitation Training

A two day training teaching those responsible for helping people move from large facilities how to facilitate conversations intended to gather necessary information. Training also focuses on organizing that information into a practical document used to better support people when they move. People will actually work with a person in services and his/her team to develop a person centered description. It is recommended attendees have participated in Person Centered Thinking training prior to attending this session.

Purpose: to help service coordinators, transition specialists or others responsible for helping people move learn a structured but flexible process to develop a description of what is important to, important for, and how to best support the person with whom they are planning

The Training is designed to help plan developers:

- ✓ Learn who should contribute to the description
- ✓ How to use structured conversations to gather the information needed
- ✓ Recognize and organize what is important to and important for a person
- ✓ Develop a practical and useful document that also describes how to best support a person
- ✓ Develop graphic recording skills
- ✓ Use graphics and words to create a "Picture of a Life" which describes what needs to be present for the person to move to a good life in the community
